DENIGATIONS AND TAX-PAYERS

To read some of our papers, written in their hostility to the sale of the Western North Carolina Railroad, a stranger would think that the tax-payers of North Carolina were a hard set, so-called, arrogant, selfish, and grasping. He would picture to himself a population altogether wanting in State pride, entirely devoid of patriotism, and each individual of them without a care or a thought for anything beyond his own household.

When the Governor of the State deemed proper to submit to the people through their representatives in General Assembly, a proposition on the part of private individuals to complete a railroad that has cost, and will continue to cost the State large sums for its construction, and in connection therewith points out to his fellow-citizens the patent fact that to accept such a proposition will relieve them of a heavy burden of taxation, his action is characterized as an unworthy appeal to the "worldly passions" of the tax-payers.

It is denounced as an act of cynicism, made demagogic, intended simply to cajole and deceive the "dear people," as they are sneeringly termed. Scarcely a word of the tax-payers of the State, a class that fortunately embraces nearly the whole of our population, we have never witnessed before, and we devoutly hope never to witness again.

Not can we see any reason for it. It may be our fault, but for the life of us we cannot see any crime in being a tax-payer, nor in a very natural desire to have the same as light as possible. Governments are sometimes called upon to do necessary evils, but we hardly thought that principle citizens, such as an extent as to make those who supported them criminals. Indeed we had, in our simplicity, hitherto regarded tax-payers as a rather meritorious class of people.

But times change and men change with them, and in the utterance of the opponents of the sale, especially in some of our papers, we constantly meet with sneers about the "worldly passions" of the tax-payers.

We respectfully submit to our friends that if they desire the good of the party whose mouth pieces they should be, the course they are pursuing is one little calculated to bring about that end. The tax-payers in North Carolina, we are happy to believe, constitute an overwhelming majority of our people. It would be a good thing for the State if all its citizens were tax-payers, for when wealth is unequally divided, such sneers at the "dear people" as are now being made are necessarily productive of much mischief.

But it is wonderful how circumstances alter cases. When Governor Jarvis tells the people that by selling one road they can reduce their taxes, and that to reduce taxes is a good thing, he is denounced, more or less openly, as a demagogue, Governor of the State though he be. When, however, Mr. Jarvis tells the people that by selling their road, already loaded with liens and mortgages, they can with the proceeds of a sale relieve themselves of taxation, pay all their indebtedness, drain all their swamp lands, and educate all their children, it is a perfect little gem of patriotism, sagacious statesmanship and wise forethought.

Now we are heartily in favor of Mr. Jarvis pointing out to the people how they can reduce their taxes, for we believe it to be a high, patriotic duty to reduce taxes to the lowest point consistent with good government. Nor would we object to the plan proposed by him but for the two reasons, first, that the sale of these railroads in their present encumbered condition would barely bring a fractional part of the money he thinks it will, and second, because his plan is the abandonment of the backbone line, a line which the good people of the whole State demand shall be completed.

But we only started to say that it was wrong that it should be wise and patriotic in Mr. Jarvis to seek to reduce taxes, and altogether demagogical in Gov. Jarvis to seek to do so.

MR. DORTCH AND THE NEWS

The Goldsboro Messenger, the home organ of Mr. Dortch, quite loses its temper over an article of the News, which called attention to the fact that Mr. Dortch's course in opposing the bill for the sale of the Western North Carolina Railroad met with the cordial approval of such Republicans as Humphrey, Smith and Russell. The Messenger does not publish the article, which it complains, but goes on to defend the demagoguery of Mr. Dortch and to abuse the News. If it had printed the article, its readers would have seen, as its editor should have seen, that neither the personal nor the political integrity of Mr. Dortch has been assailed. The fact that the Republicans mentioned are supporting the policy of Mr. Dortch, is not denied. We know the character of Mr. Dortch, personal and political, and we have refrained from copying the articles of some of our contemporaries regarding a sum of money received by him in Florida for the Western North Carolina Railroad, because such a thing as the slightest breach of trust, as a man or as a lawyer, upon his part is not for one moment to be imagined, nor have we copied other articles, alluding to Mr. Dortch as an attorney for the Wilmington & Weldon Railroad Company, because we did not believe that Mr. Dortch as a Senator could be swayed by considerations of that kind.

The News has, however, criticized the course of the Senator from Wayne upon the bill for the sale of the railroad, and will continue to do so; it has attempted to warn him that its result will be to benefit the Republican party, but it would seem to indicate that such a result was sought by him.

But while we have been thus careful not to do him injustice, what has been the course of Mr. Dortch himself in regard to those who advocate the sale?

His first argument was made before the Board of Directors of the Western North Carolina Railroad, and upon his return to Goldsboro it was written out and published in our late contemporaries.

rary, the Messenger. Up to this time the sale was understood, to meet the approval of the Senators and the six Democratic members of the House of Representatives at Washington, of five of his colleagues on the Board of Directors and of the Governor of the State and his council.

Mr. Dortch writes of the proposed sale: "This is a species of financial engineering which I do not understand. By it somebody will be cheated, and as usual it will be poor old North Carolina. We had enough of such operations during the Reconstruction period. I want no more of it!"

And again: "We have denounced without ceasing those who in 1868-69 sold out the State's interest in some of her most valuable roads, and now we propose a more indefensible act. Give away this road and then will follow the North Carolina and the Atlantic & North Carolina Roads."

What transactions are these which Mr. Dortch highly compares to the proposed sale? The one, a fraudulent sale of millions of acres of special tax lands which went into the pockets of Littlefield, Weigand, Andrew J. Jones and the well-known railroad ring of 1868-69; the other, and the more notable of the two, was that of the stock in the Wilmington & Weldon Railroad belonging to the Literary Fund. That stock was sold at less than its value by Ashley and his set, and the proceeds accounted for in special tax bonds. This Mr. Dortch says was less "indefensible" than the proposed sale. If Mr. Dortch is correct, we can not escape the conclusion that the Congressional delegation, the Directors and the Executive Officers, are obliged to be either thieves or dupes.

Now if the Messenger thinks it is proper to associate these gentlemen with Littlefield and his crew in their infamous peculations of 1868-69, can it be so utterly outrageous to associate the name of Mr. Dortch, Mr. Merritt and Mr. Merrimon with those who now agree with them in their views about the railroad. Messrs. Humphrey, Russell and Smith? We defy the Messenger to point to a single line in the News impeaching Mr. Dortch's political or personal integrity. We commend to the Messenger its own language, which may be read with profit by the opposition press.

Things have come to a pretty pass, indeed, when a demagogue cannot contend for the rights of the people, in a matter so far removed from politics as the railroad question should be, without being vilified and traduced, and one thing is sure, and that is that the Democrats of this section will not quietly submit to any such outrageous treatment.

UPON THE POLICY OF REPENTANCE

We hereby beg the pardon of The Observer for having editorially alluded to one of its correspondents without first asking its kindly permission, and we accept with all meekness its courteous remark that it was one of the "contumacious ruses" of the News. We have mislaid one of the papers which contained a printed allusion to the letter in the Observer, as that of an attorney, and we did not see the Charlotte evening paper from which a decidedly objectionable allusion concerning it was quoted to us.

We will try to obliterate our contemporary by not alluding to it in connection with the sale of the railroad again, unless its columns shall contain a direct endorsement or repudiation of the bill reported from the committee. If it shall conclude to take definite ground, one way or the other, it really must permit us to make an extract.

And we beg Judge Merrimon's pardon—not The Observer's—for having relied upon the report of his newspaper in the columns of that paper, and for commenting upon Judge Merrimon's regard that Messrs. Davis and Ruffin were not "paid attorneys."

Really, we cannot feel that we are to blame, for who could have expected to find out of our own anything reported concerning Judge Merrimon in the columns of the Observer?

If that portion of the speech commented upon in our columns of Sunday is also reported incorrectly (and we should confess to some relief for the legal reputation of Judge M., if this should turn out to be true) we desire to place the responsibility where it belongs.

We append the correction of the Observer: "In the same article the News says Judge Merrimon was promptly rebuked on Thursday night by Governor Jarvis for a thing of Mr. Davis and Colonel Ruffin, and then naively expressed his regret that these distinguished gentlemen should have given their services to North Carolina without pay. Now this is a matter that would concern us, but it was not that the News in its double-edged originalism with the Observer. The News probably got its information from the Observer's report of Judge Merrimon's remarks, which in this particular was incorrect because not quite full. Judge Merrimon made no fling at those gentlemen in that speech, nor did he express regret that they should have given their services to North Carolina without pay. He said in substance that no argument was to be drawn in favor of the proposition because Mr. Davis and Colonel Ruffin drew the bill, as they only performed the duty assigned them, like other attorneys, who work for compensation. Governor Jarvis said they did not do the work as paid attorneys, but as North Carolinians, and would receive no compensation whatever. Then Judge Merrimon asked if they entered the bill, Governor Jarvis replied, 'Yes,' and it was that reply that Judge Merrimon responded that he regretted that it should be so. As we did not deem it matter of moment, we did not make the correction in our next issue, but since the News seems to think it of consequence, we prefer to correct our error."

Believe Me, Sir, Yours Truly,

William Scott resolved to kill his obstinate son Charlie, at Delaware, Ohio, and took him home from a neighbor's house for that purpose. The boy rode quietly, listening without reply to the father's arguments in favor of the death penalty, and making no objection to the proposed means of murder—a bullet in a rifle. On attempting to open the gate, however, he drew an unsupplied pistol, took careful aim at his father's head, and shot him dead.

Person Street Church.

"Ye local" sometimes manages to get around to a church. Sunday night he found himself listening to the sermon of the Rev. Mr. Culbreth at the Person street church. He, the reporter, is generally "impressed," some may say, as all reporters are; but the discourse of this gentleman certainly impressed us most favorably, and we announce with pleasure the fact that the sermon was a "grand success," and made "impressions upon more than one."

A meeting was held in the city of Wilmington last night to consider the sale of the Western Railroad under the bill now before the General Assembly. By a telegram received here at a late hour we learn the meeting held was favorable to the sale.

This may be news to Mr. McRae. Would it not have been better for him and his cause if he had stayed at home. Those who heard Col. Ruffin answer his question last night think so.

—Mr. L. H. Yeargan, of Yeargan, Petty & Co., left the city yesterday morning for New York and the Eastern markets to buy the additional stock of spring and summer goods for the enterprising Dry Goods firm he represents. While away Mr. Yeargan will again visit the New England manufacturing cities and towns where this firm buys direct from the manufacturers, by which means they successfully compete with Northern jobbers. All their purchases are made by the case or bale in this way. Or from the Agents and Importers.
